CHRISTMAS IS COMING.

Evidences of the Approaching Holiday Seen on All Sides.

The Great Throng of Present Purchasers—The Reign of the Children—Giving Gifts Without a Heart.

It needs no consultation with the almanac to tell that Christmas is coming. There is something in the air that announces it. Its atmosphere has been enlivened for some days back. Those who are too obtuse to be affected by the subtle influence, whatever it is, have but to walk the streets during the pleasant December days, look into the shop windows, and watch the throng of earnest investigators and happy purchasers. Talfourd once said with reference to Lady Holland, that the supreme art of being happy consisted in making others happy. It is not an original idea by any means, but it serves to explain the visible cheeriness that prevades the present season. The anticipation of the pleasure to be given brightens the popular countenance, and gives the observer a better impression of human nature than he is liable to form at other times of the year. The aggregate amount of close calculation that is going on in busy heads throughout Christendom how to get the greatest outcome.

Of presents from the available sums of money is simply stupendous. It requires a clear head, as well as a Spartan determination, not to become distracted by the incongruity presented between the power of doing and opportunities of doing if the money were only plentiful enough. The shops were never more alluring. It seems as if human ingenuity and taste could go no farther than it now goes in the direction of furnishing things of beauty and attractiveness for Christmas presents. A wealth of labor and artistic talent has been displayed in the production of children's toys, which appeal to humanity. There never would have been such an outcome if there were not a demand for it. The pleasure of giving children pleasure is sui generis. It is almost acute with some people. It is said that there is no sinner villain so depraved that he will not be moved by a baby's smile. When Dinah Mulock wrote "Philip My King," she touched a true and powerful chord. No conqueror ever exacted tribute more surely than do the children from their elders, and the better and purer the elders, the more profound is the tribute paid. The pleasure which is given by merry Christmas sheds upon the children is reflected back upon society with redoubled power. The multiplicity of the toys of the present day is the sign of the times.

REGION OF THE CHILDREN.

They have brought veritable genius to their task, and the capital is devoted to them by the millions. The giving of presents among older people does not take the form of tribute to such an extent as giving to children. The demand is less impulsive and can be more easily resisted. It becomes voluntary and is the expression of matured respect and affection. It relieves the dull repression and coldness which grown people seem to think it undignified to depart from in their daily and plodding life. A good many people want to give way to what they are afraid will look like weakness. Happily these few are not predominant, but there is a strong sense of a general tendency in that direction. Mankind is a wonderfully stiff organization. It seems to be the average individual's ambition to make himself as much like a machine as possible, and to repress every spark of sentiment which will expose the fact that he has a soul. Christmas gives him an excuse to relax a little. He may then let loose some practical expression of friendship, if he has to stiffen up immediately afterward and remain so for another year. There is nothing men ought to be so proud of as the power of exercising true friendship and sympathy; there is nothing they are.

MORE CAREFUL ABOUT

Than to repress the emotions that furnish the poetry of the race. The decorations and banners of Christmas are the symbols of that amity which is the underlying principle of civilization. There can be no progress without co-operation, and there can be no true co-operation without the spirit of love, which means so much more than mere concord. The Christian sometimes have their substantial value therefore. They are seasons of sentiment, of gladness and relaxation, but they mark the existence of the heaven of human development. And what a blank in the year would be left without them! There is no use in going beneath the surface to become convinced of the good there is in the brightness and bustle of these weeks. It is self-evident. In this grand Christmas account the items are not entered in dollars and cents. Like the widow's mite, the value of the gift must be measured by that generosity and willingness there is in it. The will counts for the deed where the deed is impracticable, but it is a good thing that the will should be in some way made known. There is no such investment as expressions of good feeling. The returns are immediate, and the income lasting. There are necessarily numerous little self-sacrifices made on every one of these days that precede Christmas, and they are good things in themselves. They give exercise to the best moral faculties and serve to strengthen the body while each individual is having a race. Let the bangles gladden the toy's laugh, and the glee sparkle. There is a harmony in it all. Let the busy feet and fingers be active and the spirits rise with the healthy excitement of preparation. There is nearly as much pleasure in the work as there is in the moment of its consummation.

A young Old City lady recently visited New York, and when she returned home, related to her friends that she stopped at "the noblest hotel in the world and down stairs in a cul-de-sac." Her parents should cultivate her. Old City Derrick.

THE CRANK.

It is only within the past few months that the term "Crank," as applied to peculiar types of insanity, has come into general use. Yet the word is so expressive in its character that the whole English speaking world has instinctively grasped its meaning. As near as can be ascertained the term is of ancient origin, being employed in the old Scandinavian language and having an existence before the Saxons entered England. Originally it meant "twist," and is employed in that sense in many ancient literary works, although Webster gives it no special significance, except where used adjectively, when it means bold or forward. By referring to authorities it will be found that the term was used over 200 years ago, when it meant a "cheat" or an "impostor." Carlyle employed the word frequently in his writings, meaning "dim of vision, violent of temper and hasty in action." In one of Fletcher's comedies the word is used to describe one of the characters, and is explained in a foot note as signifying "pest." At the present time the term is specifically applied when reference is made to an unreasonable or troublesome character. In the case of the recent type of the crank it may mean a pest or a nuisance. The crank is not considered insane. He may be morally irresponsible, but at the same time is above the ordinary idiot in being able to distinguish between right and wrong. In intellect and ability the crank is always superior to the lunatic. The word faithfully applies to the Guiteau-Mason-Jones style of imbecile, although the distinction may be carried still farther and the tribe divided into numerous classes. That the word "crank" does not mean insane is evident, and that from the special significance of the term there are cranks in every walk of life cannot be doubted. There are religious cranks, legal cranks, newspaper cranks, business cranks, medical cranks, railroad cranks, Congressional cranks, and cranks that would like to have the Congressional added to their names. In fact there are all kinds of cranks, but the most virulent type of the disease is the assassination crank, the Guiteau, the Masons and the Joneses of the present day. Verily this is the day and age of cranks and the curse of mankind is to be great.

The latest intelligence from Russia substantiates the information received Tuesday that the Jeannette had been crushed in the ice. From the meagre reports it appears that Engineer Melville and party have reached Jakutsk on the Lena river several hundred miles from its mouth. Captain DeLong, Dr. Ambler and party are located near the mouth of the river and are reported in a starving condition. Complete particulars are expected in a few days, as it is known that Melville has transmitted full dispatches.

One more unfortunate became a member of Arthur's Cabinet Tuesday. Timothy O. Howe, of Wisconsin, was confirmed by the Senate as Postmaster-General. In view of the fact that Filley was the coming man only a few days ago, we are inclined to wonder "Howe the successful man secured the nomination?"

The Guiteau trial is slowly drawing to a close. In connection with this idea the Burlington Hawkeye remarks: "Most people desire the end of the Guiteau trial—a rope's end with a noose in it."

A Chicago Accident—Arrangements for the Congressional Memorial Service—The Guiteau Trial—The Jeannette.

(Associated Press Dispatches.)

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—An engine and tender of the Paymaster's train of the Chicago and North Western Railway ran off into the north branch of the Chicago river on the north city limits to-day, while the company's bridge was open for a tug to pass through. The engineer of the train lost control of his locomotive in the accident, and the fireman escaped by swimming to the shore. The conductor of the train is under the wreck and is drowned. The car struck the closing bridge and at first accounts was wedged in, partly on the bridge and partly on the track.

Resolved, That the two houses of Congress will assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives on a day and hour to be fixed and announced hereafter, and in the presence of the two Houses there assembled an address on the life and character of James A. Garfield, late President of the United States, be pronounced by Hon. James G. Blaine; and that the President of the Senate pro tem. and the Speaker of the House of Representatives be requested to invite the President and ex-Presidents of the United States, heads of the several Departments, Judges of the Supreme Court, representatives of foreign Governments, Governors of the several States, Generals of the Army, Admirals of the Navy, and such officers as have received the thanks of Congress.

THE CUNNING CRANK.

Developments in the Disgusting Trial—The End in View.

(Associated Press Dispatches.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Dr. Hamilton of New York took the stand. Scoville desired to have the other experts excluded during the testimony, but the Court ruled against him. During the argument Davidge was interrupted by Guiteau, who said: "I will cut this short, Judge, by saying I am perfectly willing to have them here, I want them to live in the country. I have no confidence in their honor and integrity that's—" Davidge: "That's precisely what I am coming to." Guiteau said: "You are on the right track, Judge. I'll take you on my side. You are engaged for my side of this case." The witness was questioned at great length relative to the operations of minds, the significance of dreams, and unconscious expressions as indicative of mental progress. The counsel for the prosecution protested against the apparently objective direction of the inquiries. Scoville, smiling, "Well, gentlemen, I told you I did not know much about this subject."

GASSEY GUITEAU.

Guiteau—"Then you had better get off the case if you don't know anything about it." Guiteau appeared dissatisfied with the result of the examination and finally said to Scoville, "On ten cents, send Clark Mills; he is a good deal better man for you than this one. He took a cast of my head the other day, thinking some people would be interested to see it. He took a bust of Andrew Jackson, and he thinks it greater than Jackson's was. He found one side of my head badly deficient, though." The prisoner then branched off to the "inspiration theory," and rattled on for some time his oft-repeated harangue on the subject of irresistible pressure. "I think Reed and myself do better than you, judging by the way you are laboring." Looking over the notes which Scoville held in his hand, he continued, "You have got a lot of stuff there; it is not in your handwriting; I guess it must have been contributed by some crank."

THE END APPROACHING.

District Attorney Corkhill stated to-day that he thought the Guiteau trial would be over by Christmas. The counsel for the Government are very well satisfied with the progress of the case. They are also satisfied that it will result in the conviction of the prisoner. Some very important witnesses remain yet to be called. The testimony of those witnesses will be on line with the testimony offered by the Government during the last two or three days.

THE WRECKED JEANNETTE.

Particulars From the Survivors—Instructions to Russia.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—The Secretary of State and the Secretary of the Navy had a conference this afternoon as to the best method to pursue in reference to the steamer Jakutsk, and agreed that the only thing to be done at present was to telegraph to the U. S. Minister at St. Petersburg to request the Russian government to furnish all assistance in their power, primarily and otherwise, towards bringing the survivors to a place of communication, so that they might be enabled to reach home.

MELVILLE'S MESSAGE.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 21.—Engineer Melville has forwarded by native long distance to Mr. Bennett of the New York Tribune a wire of funds which have been forwarded by post, addressed to General Ignatieff, Oct. 29th. Ninemire and Novas, the seamen who were in boat No. 1, joined their comrades, and stated that Lieut. DeLong, Dr. Ambler and twelve others had reached the northern mouth of the Lena and were starving. An expedition was sent out to rescue them. The survivors had lost everything. Engineer Melville says money is urgently needed and should be sent by telegraph to Jakutsk. He has urgently requested that six thousand roubles be transmitted immediately to the Governor of Jakutsk for the return and care of the ship-wrecked men.
